

increase in ridership of about 30 percent. However, this increase does not necessarily correlate with a decrease in car traffic.

Evidence suggests that when buses and subways are free, people often take bus and train trips they would not have taken otherwise while still using their cars nearly as much as they did before. In 2013 Tallinn, Estonia, instituted fare-free rides for city residents (becoming the largest city in the world to do so), but car use in Tallinn has only slightly 14 declined; as a 2014 study by the KTH Royal Institute of Technology in Sweden found that car traffic in Tallinn was down less than 3 percent since 15 it was enacted.

NO CHANGE

This choice includes a punctuation error. A colon can't be used to link an independent clause ("as a 2014 study found that car traffic in Tallinn was down less than 3 percent since it was enacted") to a dependent clause ("as a 2014 study found that car traffic in Tallinn was down less than 3 percent since it was enacted"). Notice that the second clause begins with the subordinating conjunction "as"—it can't stand on its own as a sentence.

This is the best choice. The colon correctly links the independent clause that illustrates what has happened to the dependent clause that provides evidence for the statement before the colon. The independent clause that follows the colon provides evidence for the statement before the colon: "car use in Tallinn has only slightly declined."

Note that the colon is used correctly. + Scroll for more questions
