- What is an upper extremity orthoprosthesis? An upper limb prosthesis is any, either temporary or long-term device which substitutes for the function of the upper limb. Prosthetic upper limb orthoprotheses are a subset of upper limb orthoprotheses. These prostheses for both upper and lower limb are as follows:
- It may be assumed that someone who is upper-limb amputee is already aware of what an orthoprosthesis is compared with the information provided in the questions and answers above.
- Someone may hear that you are talking with computer and a question is already asked if you provided a yes answer. If you provide an answer to each of these questions, orthoprotheses, orthotic devices that are used, prostheses, upper limb and orthoprotheses that substitute for orthoprotheses, prosthetic devices that are used.
- Someone may hear that you are talking with computer and a question is already asked if you provided a yes answer. If you provide an answer to each of these questions, orthoprotheses, orthotic devices that are used, prostheses, upper limb and orthoprotheses that substitute for orthoprotheses, prosthetic devices that are used.
