Introduction:

Person X is a person of interest for many molecular genetic related cases. As a Grade 12 Biology student, your recently learned knowledge and hard work throughout the molecular genetics unit is finally going to pay off as you volunteered to be the lead scientist(s) in all these cases, and making Ms. Sakran proud ☺.

Case 1: Genetic Testing & DNA Mutations:

Person X has been having trouble digesting dairy products. A friend recommended that they have their DNA sequenced to check if their gene corresponding to making the lactase enzyme has any mutations in it and thus could be the issue. Therefore, Person X decided to go to a Genome X a genetics lab in Milton to have their DNA extracted and sequenced. Genome X used the following DNA extraction method, extracting Person X's DNA from their cheek cells. As the lead scientist(s) you are the one to conduct the DNA extraction from Person X and sequence their DNA.

- You conduct the DNA extraction using the following:
<https://learn.genetics.utah.edu/content/labs/extraction/> Describe the DNA extraction method you used. [4 Marks C]

You then isolate for the lactase gene in Person X, cut it out, and decide to conduct analysis on it. However, while cutting out the lactase gene you decide to keep some of the non-coding DNA surrounding the lactase gene so as not to destroy the beginning or end of the gene while cutting it. Your genome database contains the full normal genetic sequence of the lactase gene. You create the below DNA table with both sets of DNA.

	Coding Strand
Normal	ATGATGGAGAAAGCCCATTGTTATAGGTGA
Person X	TCTTCGCATGATGGAGAAAGCCCATTGATATAGGTGAAA
