

20. Kappo

Sasoi-katsu

1-2. The person should be sitting before you, with legs crossed. Bend your right knee and place the knee against his spine, lifting your right hand from the floor. Spread your fingers and place your hands on his lower chest, hooking your fingers under his lower ribs. Pull back as if turning the ribs to either side, put your weight on the shoulders as if bent his body back, and press forward with your right knee, lifting your foot from the floor. This will draw air into his lungs. When his ribs have been opened as far as they will go, release them. Air will be expelled from his lungs. Repeat the process slowly and regularly, at a rate of 10 to 15 times a minute, until he begins breathing by himself. If you see a slight effort to breathe on his part, take care to maintain his movement, not to oppose them.

Inductive Method

3. Lift the right side of the patient and support his head with your left arm around his shoulder. Lift the right side of your right hand on his abdomen, and press up against the surface of it as if to stretch. This will cause a vacuum to be created, sucking air from the lungs. Repeat the process by bending his upper body and lifting his left arm.

4. Gently release your pressure on the lungs. Repeat this procedure.

5. If you want to administer on the patient's jaw with your right hand, your left hand on his right shoulder, hold it about with your right arm.

During practice and tournament competition, a judoka is sometimes choked into unconsciousness, and his breathing stops. He may be suffocated by congestion, anemia, brain compression or defective oxidation in the bloodstream caused by pressure on the carotid arteries, trachea or vagus nerves. If kappo (resuscitation techniques) are applied promptly, there is no cause for alarm.

Kappo developed as a part of jujutsu in the eighteenth century alongside nage, the art of attacking the body's vital points. Both were treated as secret arts. Instruction was oral, and students were forbidden to pass their knowledge on to others without their master's permission.

Numerous methods of kappo have been devised, including randen-katsu (lower abdomen method), juno-katsu (kidney method), dekishi or tsuchi-katsu (treatment for drowning victims) and ise-katsu (harding treatment). The four techniques given below are the ones most often resorted to.

When applying any of the resuscitation techniques, it is important that nothing obstructs the passage of air into the trachea, food, water, the tongue, or some other object which is removed with the fingers. Have someone hold the tongue, or tie a rubber band around it and loop the end to a finger. If you have a safety pin, you can pin his tongue to the floor. If a drowning victim, you should first drain the water from his face down, his head lower than his feet. Then roll him over and apply the technique. A cylinder of some kind is rolled over the abdomen. The victim should be kept as warm as possible.

A person knocked unconscious by a throw should be put on his back, and be kept warm. Avoid giving him anything to eat or drink at once.
