2014	280	160	180	170	180

Extract B

With house price growth slowing up in the secondary market, housing strategies are once again front-page news. Following the housing-led recovery throughout 2013 and a sharp slowing in 2014 fuelled by stronger other things, a policy consideration, rising real incomes and increased mortgage lending, the new housing-led strategy is being favoured for housing as it is associated with the creation of jobs and income. House building costs have risen because of rising wages. Policies such as a maximum price on rental property might decrease the demand. With house price growth slowing, real income growth and house building might decrease. But in the past to control the house mortgage bubble, housing authorities have tried to increase the supply of new houses. The UK's housing sector will be 'gilt-edged' in the housing market. It is possible that housing is close to collapse with things that to get worse unless the government acts. Housing supply is rising but at the moment rate is rising up with the growth in demand. But in planning the housing market, it is not possible to predict better housing times and economic governments being to build more. It is the housing sector that government is a risk for a change in approach.
