Education in Palliative Care Bee Wee, Nic Hughes, 2007-02-22 Despite the fact that most palliative care educators are involved in teaching there is little literature devoted to education specifically within palliative care This book bridges that gap giving a wide ranging global view of palliative care education It offers theoretical and practical insights along with specific suggestions for developing knowledge and skills for teaching It also contains extensive accounts of important contextual matters which influence the range and quality of palliative care education including interprofessional learning continuing professional development evaluation and educational leadership The development of palliative care as a clinical speciality is increasingly conducted at an international level and a special feature of this book is the inclusion of chapters reviewing palliative care education in each continent This enables practitioners and teachers to share knowledge across diverse healthcare systems and cultures There is also an acknowledgement of the multi professional team involved in palliative care as education and training are looked at from the perspectives of doctors nurses and allied health professionals The book is split into three distinct parts Part 1 sets the scene for existing palliative care education both in the UK and internationally Part 2 focuses on the theory underpinning each aspect of teaching learning and assessment and then examines the practicalities of delivering these in the clinical setting Part 3 explores ways of building and nurturing a culture of learning in palliative care whether as an individual or as an organization

Transforming Curriculum Through Teacher-Learner Partnerships Nair, Pradeep, Keppell, Michael James, Lim, Chee Leong, Mari, Tamil Salvi, Hassan, Nurhanim, 2020-12-11 Empowering learners for life requires a fundamental shift in higher education curriculum design New priorities pedagogies technologies spaces and assessment strategies are required to enable learners to take ownership of their learning Student centeredness concepts are still prescriptive in nature as most decisions on curriculum assessment teaching and learning approaches are still teacher centric Teachers are developing student centered learning environments without the involvement of the learners in the planning decision making and or design process In addition some lecturers are still practicing the traditional approaches of content delivery and conventional assessment methods rather than experimenting with innovative practices suited for student centered approaches Therefore there is an ongoing need for research focused on the importance and effectiveness of a paradigm shift in education that involves student teacher partnerships fueled by innovative teaching and learning designs where students take an active role and contribute as partners in learning Transforming Curriculum Through Teacher Learner Partnerships captures experiences and evidence among teachers in exploring the possibility of active student participation in curriculum design delivery and assessment through teacher learner partnership The chapters address issues of teacher learner partnerships in designing the learning environment and how student centered methods create resilient adaptable and future capable learners While highlighting topics within this scope such as learner autonomy learning performance self efficacy and teaching pedagogy this book is ideally intended for teachers administrators teacher educators practitioners stakeholders researchers academicians and students interested in issues related to the teacher learner partnership
