ON PINS AND NEEDLES

BY TIGER WOODS
Golf Digest Features Writing Editor

As with a long bunker shot, the key from pine needles is making solid contact. You must hit the ball first. To do that, take a slightly wider stance than normal and position the ball more toward the middle of it. Then take a longer club and swing wide.

Here on Augusta National's par 3, 236 is the final round last year, I was faced with two challenges: I had to hit the ball cleanly from pine needles and play a 10-yard cut to avoid the trees blocking my line to the green, 230 yards away. From an open stance, I swung a 3-iron along the line of my feet. Then I made sure to keep the face of the club open through impact. A full finish was necessary because of the distance I had to carry the ball.
