11. At your next science, write down Lamarck's theory of acquired characteristics.

Lamarck's theory of acquired characteristics is the idea that an organism's physical characteristics can change over time because of changes in their environment.

12. At your next science, write down Darwin's theory of natural selection.

Darwin's theory of natural selection is the idea that organisms with traits that are better suited to their environment will survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring.

13. At your next science, write down the difference between the two theories.

- The main difference between the two theories is that Lamarck's theory of acquired characteristics suggests that organisms can change over time because of changes in their environment, while Darwin's theory of natural selection suggests that organisms with traits that are better suited to their environment will survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring.
