

Respiratory Assessment for Nurses (part two)

Introduction

Part one of Respiratory Assessment for Nurses outlined the importance of appropriate respiratory assessment to improve care outcomes for the acutely ill ward patient. Moreover, it is recognised that deterioration in physiological status is often not appreciated, nor acted on in a timely manner (NICE 2007, Cioffi 2000b, Considine and Botti 2004, Franklin and Matthew 1994, Massey et al 2008). Evidence suggests that clinical staff may lack the required knowledge and skills to perform a comprehensive respiratory assessment which ultimately has a deleterious effect on the potential to minimise adverse patient events (Harrison et al 2006, Considine 2005, Kause et al 2004, Massey et al, 2008). In the first part of this article, respiratory inspection and palpation were described and discussed. In this second article the skills of percussion and auscultation will be explained in order to equip cardiac nurses with a comprehensive systematic model for respiratory assessment.

Percussion

Percussion is a key component of respiratory assessment that should be used in conjunction with auscultation to aid differential diagnosis (Mangione 2008). Percussion produces audible sounds (percussed notes) and palpable vibrations which can help to determine if the underlying lung tissue is filled with fluid, air or solid material (Douglas et al 2009). Pathophysiological changes occurring in the lungs as a result of conditions such as pneumothorax, pleural effusion and consolidation alter the characteristics of percussion notes which, when considered in the context of a comprehensive respiratory examination can assist with differential diagnosis. Percussion should be performed in sequence in the interspaces at 5cm intervals (avoiding the damping effect of the scapulae and ribs) over both sides of the chest, whilst paying close attention to the audible changes in percussion notes (Jarvis 2007) (figure 1). Percussion technique requires practice and can be difficult to master but good technique is important to extract accurate findings.
