

Executive 2.2: Executive Appointments

Executive Appointments (and removal) start in the WH and end in the US.

- (1) How does position that can be given confer the President is appointments power. The United States Constitution provides that the president "shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint and dismiss, either public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are within his authority provided."
- (2) What is the Senate? The Senate is an advisory body made up of the heads of the 48 Executive Departments. Appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, the members of the Cabinet are the senior President's closest advisors.
- (3) What positions are given by the President?
 - (a) What Appointments - No person shall be appointed to the office of the President more than twice, and no person shall ever hold the office of President, or acted as President, for more than two years of a term in which some other person was elected President, whether elected to the office of the President or as that person.
 - (b) What Appointments - The Vice President shall be Vice President of the United States, and shall be President in all his absence from office. The Senate shall also provide for the appointment of a Vice President when that office becomes vacant.
 - (c) Article II (and other exceptions) - The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment by, and Conviction of, the Senate. Impeach, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.
- (4) Impeachment of Congress members, President's appointments? The Senate has the sole power to remove those of the President's appointments that require consent, and to nullify treaties.
- (5) Senate the Senate:
 - (a) Legislative role - a power that refers to congressional legislation passed by a majority of Congress, but not subject by the President's ability to veto, or other action taken by congressional majority.
