Proteau,D. Elliott,1992-02-20 Since the classic studies of Woodworth 1899 the role of vision in the control of movement has been an important research topic in experimental psychology While many early studies were concerned with the relative importance of vision and kinesthesia and or the time it takes to use visual information recent theoretical and technical developments have stimulated scientists to ask questions about how different sources of visual information contribute to motor control in different contexts In this volume articles are presented that provide a broad coverage of the current research and theory on vision and human motor learning and control Many of the contributors are colleagues that have met over the years at the meetings and conferences concerned with human movement They represent a wide range of affiliation and background including kinesiology physical education neurophysiology cognitive psychology and neuropsychology Thus the topic of vision and motor control is addressed from a number of different perspectives In general each author sets an empirical and theoretical framework for their topic and then discusses current work from their own laboratory and how it fits into the larger context A synthesis chapter at the end of the volume identifies commonalities in the work and suggests directions for future experimentation American Motorcyclist

The practice of robotics and computer vision both involve the application of computational algorithms to data. Over the fairly recent history of the fields of robotics and computer vision a very large body of algorithms has been developed. However this body of knowledge is something of a barrier for anybody entering the field or even looking to see if they want to enter the field. What is the right algorithm for a particular problem and importantly How can I try it out without spending days coding and debugging it from the original research papers. The author has maintained two open source MATLAB Toolboxes for more than 10 years one for robotics and one for vision. The key strength of the Toolboxes provide a set of tools that allow the user to work with real problems not trivial examples. For the student the book makes the algorithms accessible the Toolbox code can be read to gain understanding and the examples illustrate how it can be used instant gratification in just a couple of lines of MATLAB code. The code can also be the starting point for new work for researchers or students by writing programs based on Toolbox functions or modifying the Toolbox code itself. The purpose of this book is to expand on the tutorial material provided with the toolboxes add many more examples and to weave this into a narrative that covers robotics and computer vision separately and together. The author shows how complex problems can be decomposed and solved using just a few simple lines of code and hopefully to inspire up and coming researchers. The topics covered are guided by the real problems observed over many years as a practitioner of both robotics and computer vision. It is written in a light but informative style it is easy to read and absorb and includes a lot of Matlab examples and figures. The book is a real walk through the fundamentals of robot kinematics dynamics and joint level control then camera models image processing feature extraction and epipolar geometry and bring it all together in a visual servo system.
