Shoes and Pattens Francis Grew, Museum of London, Margrethe de Neergaard, 2001 Until recently very little was known about medieval shoes Glimpses in manuscript illustrations and on funerary monuments with the occasional reference by a contemporary writer was all that the costume historian had as evidence not least because leather tends to perish after prolonged contact with air and very few actual examples survived In recent years however nearly 2 000 shoes many complete and in near perfect condition have been discovered preserved on the north bank of the Thames and are now housed in the Museum of London This collection all from well dated archaeological contexts fills this vast gap in knowledge making it possible to chart precisely the progress of shoe fashion between the twelfth and fifteenth centuries

Textiles and the Medieval Economy Angela Ling Huang, Carsten Jahnke, 2014-06-30 Archaeologists and textile historians bring together 16 papers to investigate the production trade and consumption of textiles in Scandinavia and across parts of northern and Mediterranean Europe throughout the medieval period Archaeological evidence is used to demonstrate the existence or otherwise of international trade and to examine the physical characteristics of textiles and their distribution in order to understand who was producing using and trading them and what they were being used for Historical evidence mainly textual is employed to link textile names to places numbers and prices and thus provide an appreciation of changing economics patterns of distribution and the organisation of trade Different types and qualities of cloths are discussed and the social implications of their production and import export considered against a developing background of urbanism and increasing
