

The Digestive System

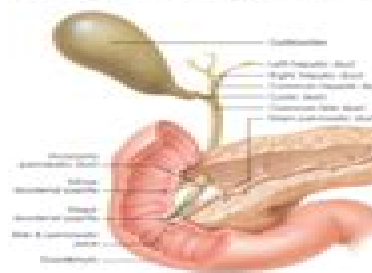

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

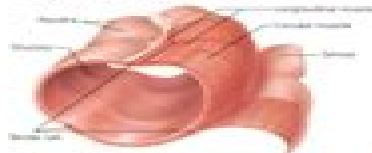

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile and releases it into the duodenum.

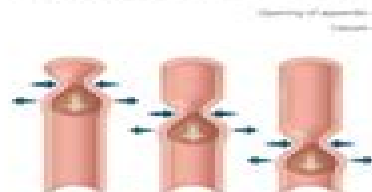

Layers of large intestine

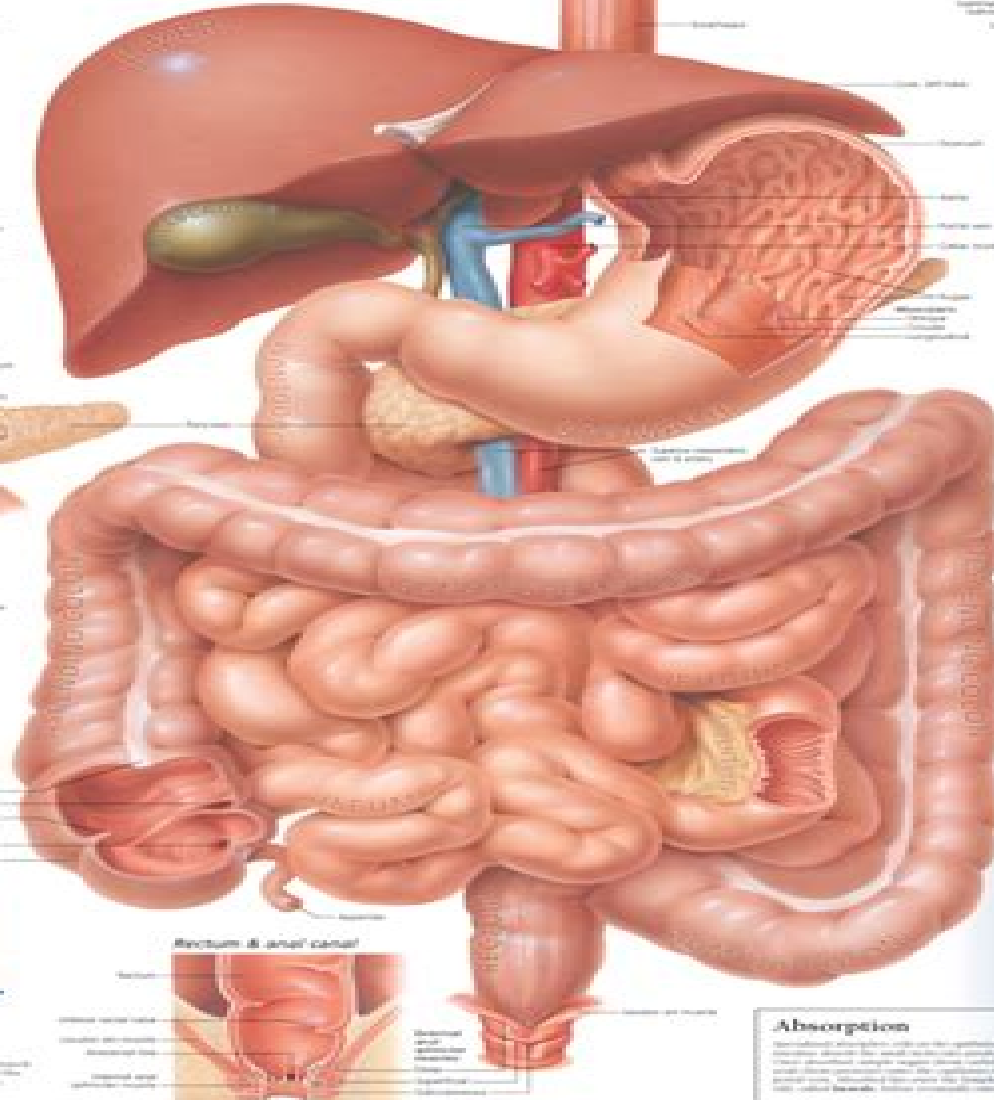

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the colon, and the rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food, forming feces. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, and sigmoid colon.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

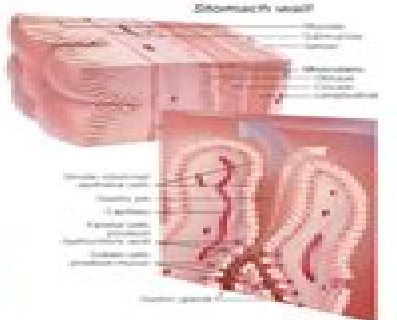

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, begins in the mouth. The tongue and lips are used to break down the food into smaller pieces. Salivary glands, located in the mouth, secrete saliva, which contains the enzyme amylase. Saliva also moistens the food, making it easier to swallow.

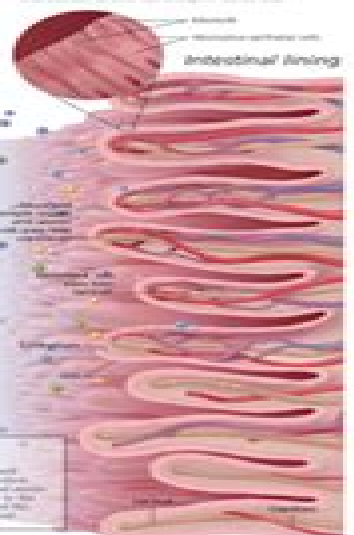

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for mixing food with gastric juices. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscle, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the majority of nutrient absorption. It is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum. The small intestine is covered in a network of blood vessels called the capillary network, which helps in the absorption of nutrients.

Intestinal lining

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of the vast majority of nutrients from the food. The lining of the small intestine is covered in tiny finger-like projections called villi, which increase the surface area for absorption. The villi are covered in a network of blood vessels, which helps in the absorption of nutrients.
