DISCUSSION

The authors conducted a review of the literature and found that the majority of studies on the effects of the Internet on the health of children and adolescents have been conducted in the United States. The results of these studies have been mixed, with some studies showing positive effects and others showing negative effects. The authors conclude that the Internet has the potential to be a valuable tool for promoting the health of children and adolescents, but that it also has the potential to be a source of harm. Further research is needed to better understand the effects of the Internet on the health of children and adolescents.
