

From the topic The Ten Principles of Economics, I have learned the origin of the word economy, which is the Greek word "oikonomos" meaning one who manages the household and how similar an economy is to a household. I have learned that scarcity is the foundation of economics and that Economics is the study of managing resources to satisfy society's unlimited wants.

Furthermore, I have also learned to identify the fundamental principles that govern the study of Economics which is the Ten Principles of Economics which is also group into three categories which are How People Make Decisions, How People Interact with One Another, and How The Economy Works. The ten principles are:

1. People Face Trade-Offs
2. The cost of something is what you give up to get it
3. Rational people think at the margin
4. People respond to incentives
5. Trade can make everyone better off
6. Markets are usually a good way to organize economics activity
7. Government can sometimes improve market outcomes
8. A country's standard of living depends on its ability to produce goods and services
9. Prices rise when the government prints too much money
10. Society faces a short-run trade-off between inflation and unemployment

Upon learning about the ten principles, I have also understood what each principle entails. From this point on, I will point out all that I have learned from each principle.

How People Make Decisions

1. People Face Trade-Offs

- This principle is born because of scarcity. It highlights that people face different kinds of trade-offs everyday wherein they are put in a position of having to choose between two options.
- Trade-offs allow for better understanding of options which lead to better decisions
- There is always conflict between Efficiency and Equality which Economics try to balance out
 - Efficiency means getting the most benefit from scarce resources while;
 - Equality means that benefits are distributed uniformly among society's members

2. The cost of something is what you give up to get it

- This principle highlights the concept of opportunity cost which is what must be given up in order to obtain something
- There are two types of opportunity cost:
 - Implicit is a non-monetary cost while;
 - Explicit costs are monetary costs

Gregory Mankiw, 2002-02 Investment Decisions on Illiquid Assets Jaroslaw Morawski, 2009-02-14 Jaroslaw Morawski offers a practicable and theoretically well founded solution to the problems encountered when investing in illiquid assets and develops a model of the liquidation process for this category of investments The result is a coherent investment decision framework designed specifically for private real estate but applicable also to other illiquid assets The Versatility of the Real Estate Asset Class - the Singapore Experience Kim Hin David HO, 2021-02-22 Chapter 1 takes a close look at two types of heterogeneous investors momentum and disposition to form a unique difference model to interpret housing price dynamics Three parameters are crucial namely auto correlation the rate of mean reversion and the contemporaneous adjustment towards long term equilibrium price The key implication is that the 2006 boom of the Singapore private housing market does not offer as large a magnitude as that from the price gain in the 1990 s boom and recovery over the long term Singapore s private housing market is low risk offering stable returns owing to virtually no divergence even in the speculative 1990s The best way to invest is to consider the momentum strategy and avoid the herd behaviour for profit sustainability For policy makers the Singapore private housing market is over damped in the long run Chapter 2 adopts game theory to look at the private residential development oligopolistic market the determination of residential development sale prices in an uncertain market and under incomplete information of competing developers the dynamic interaction among developers the time lags of the development project completion from project start and the launching of the residential development for sale before completion and the residential development s own capacity constraints Developers tend to cooperate for long term benefit leading to a sales slowdown Relatively high profits earnable in the first few periods provide an allowance to price undercut others to sell much faster First mover advantage in a new market is evident As uncertainty rises prices decrease while price variability increases Chapter 3 looks at the institutional nature of legal origin and the total returns TRs derived from investing in a country s direct real estate and via the adoption of a multi factor arbitrage pricing theory APT model The 1st and 4th order autoregressive model is adopted to de smooth the TRs De smoothed data is used in conjunction with 2 macroeconomic variables real GDP growth rate and interest rate and 1 real estate risk factor vacancy rate to form the multi factor structural model A pooled panel analysis is conducted with the law system dummies denoting British legal origin and French legal origin and the factor loadings i e the sensitivity of the risk factor to the TRs Macroeconomic and real estate risk factors in equilibrium affect the TRs Vacancy rate commands high and significant risk premium owing to its direct impact on the TRs relative to GDP growth rate and interest rate Chapter 4 is concerned with the real estate mezzanine investment REMI a new financial instrument for Asia s real estate market and examines the REMI structure the measurement and characteristics of its risks and returns via a forward looking binomial asset tree BAT model Risk neutral pricing probability is adopted REMI bears more risk than typical commercial bank loans resulting in higher interest rates than pure equity Different risk issues focus on two major sources the financial loan to value LTV ratio risk and the real estate and capital markets risk Chapter 4 fulfils the need to close the gap concerning the REMI structure and performance in the steady state utilizing reliable authoritative information and data sources Lastly Chapter 5 offers this book s conclusion
