Traditionally, there has been speculation that the Burn was an underwater member of the order crocodilia. Tellingly, crocodiles or alligators are also called "Burns" by the Agtaons. There is large population of crocodiles which live in rivers in North Borneo, some far from open water, so an underground existence is not impossible for the presumed Indian crocodiles. The more fact that crocodiles are called "Burns" may not be very significant, since the Burn is described with maner-like characteristics such as an elongated neck and a forked tongue. The native name of the Komodo dragon is "Land Crocodile". Both Bernard Huxley, and Rex Maclat regard the Burn to be a large Komodo dragon-like monster, and there are fossils of such a creature from Western India under the name of "Javan" where they seem to merge into the Iranian crocodilian dragon or more, respectively, where they seem to merge into the Iranian stylized adaptation of the Chinese dragon. George Eberhart notes removal of a similar creature in the name of "Javan", which in Iranian set in basically a local stylized creature in the form of the Chinese dragon. George Eberhart notes removal of a similar creature in the form of the Chinese dragon, called the afa, possibly the same thing as the Burn. The Burn is also noted in his checklist of unknown animals that similar reports in the form of the Burn from Burma, and they might also relate to a reported Burn-like mythical river monster.

Cryptozoologist Karl Shuker claims that the Bura was a giant lungfish noting that this provides a far more comprehensive, comparable match not only in terms of morphology but also with regard to behaviour. Shuker believes this explains the Bura's alleged ability to survive hidden at the bottom of lakes during the dry season. Shuker's view admittedly does nothing to account for the various other horn-like creatures as cited in this article. It also does not account for the spotted features of the long neck and forked tongue.

Cryptozoology A to Z is the most complete reference ever of the newest zoological science Mysterious Creatures George M. Eberhart, 2002-12-17 A comprehensive guide to cryptozoology the quest to identify animals that have not been officially catalogued by science and to place these unknown animals into their proper zoological categories In this fascinating two volume encyclopedia author George M Eberhart provides a comprehensive catalog of nearly 1 000 cryptids unknown animals usually reported through eyewitness accounts and not yet described by science Cryptids are the stuff of folklore hoaxes and genuine scientific breakthroughs There are 400 now classified cryptids once considered either extinct or pure fantasy The cryptozoologist's job is to strip away the myth misidentification and mystery and separate fact from fiction Mysterious Creatures covers everything from dinosaurs and the emala ntouka an elephant killing dinosaur like animal of central Africa to searches for the Loch Ness monster Bigfoot and other cryptozoological hoaxes Entries about specific animals include the derivation or meaning of each cryptid's name its scientific name variant names a physical description behavior description of tracks habitat significant sightings present status and possible explanations Illustrations and photographs accompany many entries The book also includes resources and references for further information

Anthropology and Cryptozoology
Samantha Hurn, 2016-11-03 Cryptozoology is best understood as the study of animals which in the eyes of Western science are extinct unclassified or unrecognised In consequence and in part because of its selective methods and lack of epistemological rigour cryptozoology is often dismissed as a pseudo science However there is a growing recognition that social science can benefit from engaging with it for as social scientists are very well aware scientific categorisation and explanation represents just one of a myriad of systems used by humans to enable them to classify and make sense of the world around them In many cultural contexts myth folk classification and lived experience challenge the truth expounded by scientists With a reflexive anthropological approach and drawing on rich empirical and ethnographic studies from around the world this volume engages with the theoretical and methodological issues raised by reported sightings of unrecognised animals Bringing into sharp focus the anthropological value and challenges for methodology posed by beliefs about unclassified creatures Anthropology and Cryptozoology Exploring encounters with mysterious creatures will be of interest to anthropologists sociologists and geographers working in the fields of research methods anthrozoology mythology and folklore and human animal interaction
