The Complex Forest Carol J.P. Colfer, 2010-09-30 The Complex Forest systematically examines the theory processes and early outcomes of a research and management approach called adaptive collaborative management ACM An alternative to positivist approaches to development and conservation that assume predictability in forest management ACM acknowledges the complexity and unpredictability inherent in any forest community and the importance of developing solutions together with the forest peoples whose lives will be most affected by the outcomes Building on earlier work that established the importance of flexible collaborative approaches to sustainable forest management The Complex Forest describes the work of ACM practitioners facing a broad range of challenges in diverse settings and attempts to identify the conditions under which ACM is most effective Case studies of ACM in 33 forest sites in 11 countries together with Colfer's systematic comparison of results at each site indicate that human and institutional capabilities have been strengthened In Zimbabwe for example the number of women involved in decisionmaking soared In Nepal community members detected and sanctioned dishonest community elites In Cameroon and Bolivia learning programs resulted in better conflict management These are early results but a wide range of recent research supports Colfer's belief that these new capabilities will eventually contribute to higher incomes and to sustainable improvements in the health of forests and forest peoples The Complex Forest reinforces calls for change in the way we plan conservation and development programs away from command and control approaches toward ones that require bureaucratic flexibility and responsiveness as well as greater local participation in setting priorities and problem solving Dulling the Cutting Edge: How Patent-Related Policies and Practices Hamper Innovation in China Dan Prud'homme, 2012-08-22 This study's statistical analysis shows that patent quality and innovation in China deserve improvement and an in depth legal management science and economic analysis in the study shows that various patent related policies and practices actually hamper patent quality and innovation in China Over 50 recommendations for reform are provided The study is divided into four chapters summaries of which are as follows Although China became the world leader in quantity of domestically filed patent applications in 2011 the quality of these patents needs improvement Also while certain innovation in China is rising the country's actual innovation appears over hyped by some sources There appears to be an overly heavy focus on government set quantitative patent targets in China which can hamper patent quality and innovation This overemphasis involves over 10 national level and over 150 municipal provincial quantitative patent targets mostly to be met by 2015 which are also linked to performance evaluations for SoEs Party officials and government ministries universities and research institutes and other entities China has a wide range of other policies many of which are at least partially meant to encourage patents that can actually discourage quality patents and highest quality patents in particular and innovation Examples of these policies include a variety of measures with requirements for indigenous intellectual property rights that are linked to financial incentives many of which are unrelated to government procurement a range of other government provided financial incentives for patent development e.g. certain patent filing subsidies inappropriate inventor remuneration rules discriminatory standardization approaches and a wide range of others There are a host of concerns surrounding rules and procedures for patent application review and those for enforcement of patent disputes that can hamper building of quality patents and innovation in China These include concerns about abuse of patent rights difficulties invalidating utility models and a wide range of other issues
