Chapter 1: Managerial Accounting

Managerial Accounting Basics

Managerial Accounting: a field of accounting that provides economic and financial information for managers and other stakeholders

Differences Between Financial and Managerial Accounting

Features	Financial Accounting	Managerial Accounting
Primary users & objectives	External users: shareholders, creditors, governments	Internal users: managers
Types and frequency of reports	Standardized, periodic reports	Customized, as needed
Purpose of reports	General purposes	Specific: for particular decisions
Content of reports	Historical financial data in uniform, highly-regulated format; limited to double-entry accounting and verifiable, externally audited accounting principles	Historical as well as other business data; detailed; includes managerial accounting for cost accounting, etc.; based on accounting for decisions
Regulation/Provision	Required by GAAP (Generally Accepted Accounting Principles)	Not independently audited

Management Functions and Organizational Structures

Group of Officers: the group of officers elected by the shareholders and management to run the organization or business organization; chief officers: president/CEO, manager (for division)

Staff Officer: officer (S/O) who can provide advice but does not have direct responsibility for managing the business; he or she manages work of those independent officers; officers can provide advice

Line Officer: jobs that are directly involved in a company's main business; controlling & managing activities

Staff Officer: jobs that support the efforts of line officers

Chief Financial Officer (CFO): the corporate officer who is responsible for all company's accounting and finance issues

Controller: the financial officer who is responsible for a company's accounting records, system of internal controls, and preparation of financial statements, tax returns, and internal reports
