

MLA Footnotes

What are Footnotes?

Footnotes, both explanatory footnotes and bibliographic footnotes, are additional blurbs of brief information given by the author to help the audience better understand a topic, term, event, person, etc. Footnotes can also provide reference information for the reader to access citations to a specific term or topic.

Explanatory Footnotes

Explanatory notes are used by the author to provide their audience with additional information. Explanatory notes, often called content notes, are used to define cultural terms, historical events, landmarks and locations, or other important points that your audience may not be immediately familiar with or may need additional information on.

An explanatory note appears at the bottom of the page where it is referenced, along with a corresponding number.

Explanatory Footnote Example: Footnotes_e are often used in informational bodies of text. They are essential towards providing the intended audience with a deeper knowledge and understanding of topics they may be unfamiliar with. College research papers may require students to use footnotes, especially in the areas of history and psychology.

Bibliographic Footnotes

Bibliographic notes are often used to provide the audience with further reference points and resources. See example:

Bibliographic Footnote Example: Bibliographic notes_e are different from explanatory notes in that they don't define terms, but instead provide readers with resources they used in their own writing.

The three little pigs built their houses out of straw,¹ sticks² and bricks.³

¹not to be confused with hay

²or lumber according to some sources

³probably fired clay bricks
