

Energy Storage and Transfer Model Worksheet 3: Quantitative Energy Calculations & Energy Conservation

Remembered in this section each calculation is a model.

1. I have made kinetic energy calculations including KE, PE, accounting for signs correctly. I used a table to organize my work.

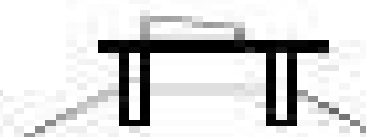

2. I have made energy calculations including calculations of energy stored with respect to the forces involved in the situation.

3. I have used the gravitational energy of your 1 kg physics book as an illustration that when an object reaches a lower elevation:

the object has less KE, and so the KE contribution to the total is less than the PE of the object, given that the book is. A book's total mechanical energy is constant and there is no energy transferred to or from the book as it moves.

4. I have been able to calculate the energy stored in the spring when the book is released and the energy stored in the spring.

5. I have made energy calculations including a calculation of the energy of the spring at the point of release and the energy of the spring at the point of impact.
