Choice, 1981

The Foundations of Laboratory Safety Stephen R. Rayburn, 2012-12-06 Safety is a word that has many connotations of risk of a possible accident that is acceptable conjuring up different meanings to different people. What is safety? A scientist views safety differently. This may be one reason why skydiving and mountain climbing are sports that are not as popular as, say, boating or skiing. A manufacturing plant engineer looks on safety as one of the necessary factors in developing a manufacturing process. But even activities that have high levels of potential risk can be engaged in safely. How is safety likely to be seen as an important part of an environmental law? A government administrator may consider various safety issues by identifying sources of hazards and by assessing the consequences of accidents inherent to these hazards. A proposed project's attorney may base a negligence suit on safety defects. Most hazards that are faced in the laboratory may be based on safety defects.
