

Reflection on an Interview on Leadership

✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

An Interview

This interview was conducted (where, when and what time - you should provide this information yourself).

- Q: Hello, thank you for agreeing to give us this interview. Let me ask you the first question right away. How did you enter your career field?
 1. A: I started, like many others, when I entered the university at the Faculty of Psychology. However, I realized very quickly that the institute would not teach me what I wanted to learn. During my third year, I decided that simultaneously with my studies, I should practice. I really enjoyed interacting with successful and motivated people. I conducted coaching sessions and advised the management of the company in which I worked at the time. After a few years later, I began to travel to different cities, conducting training sessions for practicing therapists.
- Q: This is a rather unusual path; I think for many therapists, their practice begins with counseling ordinary people. Tell me, what were some of the biggest challenges?
 1. A: At some point, I realized that people who sincerely think they can learn something in two days are not exactly the people I want to work with. I was disappointed in what I was doing then. During that period, I had severe conflicts with my parents, and my relationship collapsed. Coping with the overwhelming experience in one period was the most difficult. However, the belief that it would only make me stronger helped me move on.
- Q: Yes, indeed, personal difficulties can prevent you from climbing the career ladder. How important do you think networking is in your profession?
 1. A: Networking is one of the most critical components of the success of private practice. One of the best, in my opinion, definitions of networking sounds like this: it is building relationships with people aimed at realizing
