The analysis predicts increasing flood risk unless current flood management policies and investment levels are changed, with an increase of up to 20-fold in economic risk by the 2080s. The increase is attributable to a combination of climate change and increasing value of household, industrial and infrastructure assets. Potential responses to flooding vary widely under different socio-economic scenarios. The responses are assessed in terms of the three pillars of sustainability (social, environmental and economic). The paper concludes by putting forward strategic choices for future flood risk management.
