Healthcare Facilities in Developing Countries Amrita Dwivedi,Arvind Kumar Singh,Karam veer Yadav,2019-10-15
Beginning with an overview of the distribution and utilization of healthcare facilities in developing countries this book presents an in depth investigation of the role they play in Mau district India It analyses primary data collected through a sample survey of 680 households selected from 31 villages and two urban centres of Mau district It then moves on to discuss the conceptual and theoretical framework of healthcare facilities throwing light on the variation in their availability accessibility and affordability The book then considers the distribution of healthcare facilities focusing on their spatio temporal change and rural urban variations before moving on to addressing the relationship between the socio economic characteristics of inhabitants and their utilization pattern of healthcare facilities in the area studied Indian Journal of Social Research ,2004 Paying Out-of-Pocket for Drugs, Diagnostics and Medical Services Moneer Alam,2013-06-03
In India there is a high incidence of morbidity and malnutrition coupled with low standards of public health and expensive medical care Despite several policy initiatives and many attempts to promote a healthy society health remains an issue of concern Policy makers recognise that the country suffers unacceptably high levels of disease and premature death A 2005 report from the National Commission on Macroeconomics and Health NCMH claims that private out of pocket OOP health expenditure often has a catastrophic effect on the consumption of basic goods and services for low income households forcing many below the poverty line and often blocking private intergenerational flows severely affecting family members including the co residing elderly especially women As poverty malnutrition and enormous disparities are widespread particularly in rural areas and urban slums reliance on private health providers is fraught with serious economic consequences Disease prevalence among these groups is particularly high The market plays an increasingly important role in delivering health and diagnostic services Infrastructural bottlenecks faced by central state and local government health services force public health service users to access private medical care and incur very high out of pocket OOP expenses All these issues are in direct contradiction to India s National Population Policy 2000 and National Health Policy 2002 This book highlights some of these neglected issues and focuses largely on private expenditure on drugs and medicines for the treatment of ailments both with and without hospitalisation It examines private OOP health expenditures in rural and urban households after breaking them down into the various healthcare service components including drugs and medicines which constitute about 75 to 80 percent of OOP health expenditure and assesses the extent of capital sample households borrow to finance medical expenditure and the effect on their basic food and non food consumption requirements Federal Employee Compensation Equity Act of 1987 United States.
