cognitive ability personality human machine interactions human errors training learning individual development socialization methods and measurement The Quest for a Science of Accounting Thomas A. Lee, Peter W. Wolnizer, 2021-03-22

Originally published in 1997 the principal object of the editors in compiling this collection of Robert R Sterling's work was to make more of his publications accessible in a convenient form to the academic and professional accounting communities and to current and future generations of accounting students While it is not a complete portfolio of his published work to date this anthology contains all of Sterling's major articles Through his long term quest for a science of accounting Sterling sought to bring together accounting educators practitioners regulators and researchers in order to identify credible advancements in accounting knowledge authoritative changes to accounting practice and transforming improvements to accounting education Computational, Geometric, and Process Perspectives on Facial Cognition Michael J. Wenger, James T. Townsend, 2005-04-11 Within the last three decades interest in the psychological experience of human faces has drawn together cognitive science researchers from diverse backgrounds Computer scientists talk to neural scientists who draw on the work of mathematicians who explicitly influence those conducting behavioral experiments The chapters in this volume illustrate the breadth of the research on facial perception and memory with the emphasis being on mathematical and computational approaches In pulling together these chapters the editors sought to do much more than illustrate breadth They endeavored as well to illustrate the synergies and tensions that inevitably result from adopting a broad view one consistent with the emerging discipline of cognitive science
