true says the WHO's own cancer research agency which classified the pesticide as a probable human carcinogen in 2015. But if the WHO cancer researchers found sufficient evidence of a carcinogenic effect, how could the licensing authorities fail for decades to find any signs in the same animal studies? The search for answers leads the author of this investigative and enthralling book into official U.S. archives from the 1970s and 80s and on to the documents being used in the current European approvals process. The details of the secret studies by Monsanto Co. which this research brings to light provide unsettling insights into the entanglements between industry, private testing institutions, and the regulatory authorities. They expose a system which allows the chemical manufacturers to downplay the risks of their products. In the end, the question remains: do our governments offer greater protection to commercial interests or to our health?
