(Re)Constructing Memory: School Textbooks and the Imagination of the Nation James H. Williams, 2014-08-08 This book examines the shifting portrayal of the nation in school textbooks in 14 countries during periods of rapid political social and economic change Drawing on a range of analytic strategies the authors examine history and civics textbooks and the teaching of such texts along with other prominent curricular materials children s readers a required text penned by the head of state a holocaust curriculum etc The authors analyze the uses of history and pedagogy in building reinforcing and or redefining the nation and state especially in the light of challenges to its legitimacy The primary focus is on countries in developing or transitional contexts Issues include the teaching of democratic civics in a multiethnic state with little history of democratic governance shifts in teaching about the Khmer Rouge in post conflict Cambodia children s readers used to define national space in former republics of the Soviet Union the development of Holocaust education in a context where citizens were both victims and perpetrators of violence the creation of a national past in Turkmenistan and so forth The case studies are supplemented by commentary an introduction and conclusion

Indigenous Women, Work, and History Mary Jane Logan McCallum, 2014-05-02 When dealing with Indigenous women s history we are conditioned to think about women as private sphere figures circumscribed by the home the reserve and the community Moreover in many ways Indigenous men and women have been cast in static pre modern and one dimensional identities and their twentieth century experiences reduced to a singular story of decline and loss In Indigenous Women Work and History historian Mary Jane Logan McCallum rejects both of these long standing conventions by presenting case studies of Indigenous domestic servants hairdressers community health representatives and nurses working in modern Native ways between 1940 and 1980 Based on a range of sources including the records of the Departments of Indian Affairs and National Health and Welfare interviews and print and audio visual media McCallum shows how state run education and placement programs were part of Canada s larger vision of assimilation and extinguishment of treaty obligations Conversely she also shows how Indigenous women link these same programs to their social and cultural responsibilities of community building and state resistance By placing the history of these modern workers within a broader historical context of Aboriginal education and health federal labour programs post war Aboriginal economic and political developments and Aboriginal professional organizations McCallum challenges us to think about Indigenous women s history in entirely new ways
