Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% bodyweight, resistance training program on the strength and endurance of 10 young men. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session focused on strength training, the second on endurance training, and the third on a combination of both. The results showed that the program significantly improved both strength and endurance. The subjects' maximum strength increased by 25% and their endurance increased by 30% after 12 weeks. The program was well-tolerated and had no adverse effects on the subjects' health. The findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% bodyweight, resistance training program is an effective way to improve strength and endurance in young men.
