Excerpt from "What Future for Japan?" U.S. Maritime Planning for the Farther East, 1942-1945 by Russell W. N. Jensen.

... Japan had been able to double its population in the last fifty years, to simultaneously expand its productive power, its foreign markets, its employment for its workers, and avoid the serious food problems. ... Throughout the 1920s, as the heyday of democracy in Japan, under leadership of the political parties. During that decade Japan had committed itself to the agreements of the Washington Conference on armament limitations, the granting of universal male suffrage in 1925, and the signing of the Kaito (Open Port) Act, which nullified war as a solution to international problems. In 1928, Japan also took part in the London Naval Conference of 1928.

...According to [Pfeiffer], the 1920s were not as democratic or liberal as people like Pfeiffer maintained. While the political parties were in power, the military already played a crucial role. Even in the brightest periods of party government, the party cabinets had two of their five premiers and ministers, a third was an out-and-out militarist, and a fourth was unable to prevent the outbreak of the Manchurian crisis and the other destruction of his carefully policy toward China.

Excerpt from The Eagle and the Rising Sun: The Japanese-American War, 1941-45 by Allen S. Brown, (1984), professor of French and Modern European History.

When informed of the "Manchurian Incident" the following day, Emperor Hirohito and Prime Minister Wakiyama Kaigyo were greatly irritated, the prime minister complaining that he was "not being kept informed either by the foreign ministry or the army" of what they were doing. This was "an irresponsible action." Wakiyama insisted, for the Chinese had a couple hundred thousand men in their Manchurian territory, whereas the Japanese "had only 50,000 men." It was madness. Quite the contrary, the army minister assured him, for "we'll send in troops from Korea," a response that had been arranged well in advance. The answer was not what the prime minister was trying to hear, and he was further irritated that this was not the first time that Japanese troops had crossed the border "without government authorization." "To refer this to our minister," he suggested with surprising indignation, "I am quite prepared to instruct the military. But how can His Majesty's military act without orders?" A seemingly perverted Heishi wanted to squish the situation then and there before it got out of hand. ... In reality, the army was in charge of events, and General Hajime Sanjō, commanding Japan's Kwantung Army in Korea, was already unilaterally launching several divisions across the border by the afternoon of Sept. 21, 1931.
