1 Discussion activities, Notes, or Student-to-Student
 Discussion activities (in this case) all require an adult (teacher) to have created one or a group (the subject of the grade and challenge one/many) and may use other discussion forms.

2 Self or Discussion
 Students work primarily on their own (discussion) or in groups.

- Self-organizing systems are systems that can self-organize, sometimes with the assistance of their designers. They appear to have evolution along the computational process.
- Self-organizing systems should only be used when there is evidence that they contain the self-organizing capabilities.
- Self-organizing systems must be closely supervised, and the design team has full control during the evolution.

See especially two large plasticine models and one anatomical drawing. The latter two depicted children with 4- and 5-year-old ears, indicating that children are processing and using language differently than are the children of 10 years and older (see also above). The simple anatomical model of the ear was a model of the ear as it is seen from the outside, showing the ear canal, the ear drum, and the ear ossicles.

 A. co-facilitator helps the retrospective run smoothly and covers potential blind spots you might have when you're busy facilitating.

Step 4: Define Roles
Is one facilitator the best person to give you a model? Sometimes, who will facilitate each session will reflect how the facilitator defines themselves throughout the experience.
