Developmental Domains and Indicators

The HELP assesses children's development across five domains: Communication, Motor Skills, Social Interaction, Self-Concept, and Problem Solving. Each domain is further divided into specific indicators that are observed and recorded during the assessment.

Assessment Process

The assessment process involves observing and recording a child's behavior across the five domains. The results are then used to determine the child's developmental level and to identify any areas of concern.

How the Assessment is Conducted

The assessment is conducted by observing the child's behavior in a natural setting. The assessor records the child's responses to various tasks and activities, which are then used to determine the child's developmental level.

Scoring and Interpretation

The results of the assessment are scored based on the child's performance on each indicator. The scores are then interpreted to determine the child's overall developmental level and to identify any areas of concern.

Using the Results

The results of the assessment are used to guide the child's learning and development. Educators and parents can use the information to identify areas where the child may need additional support or enrichment.
