Rheology of Semisolid Foods Helen S. Joyner,2019-11-13 Rheology of Semisolid Foods comprehensively covers the rheological behaviors and rheological testing of semisolid foods Individual chapters focus on semisolid food structure rheological and sensory behaviors testing of various semisolid food behaviors and factors that impact those behaviors Special concentration is given to the relationships among semisolid food structures and mechanical properties and textures The second section of this work presents a series of case studies on acid milk gels and yogurt which provide a practical illustration of the concepts presented in the preceding chapters allowing readers to gain both conceptual knowledge of semisolid food rheology and an understanding of how that knowledge can be applied to a food system of choice Individual components processing parameters and storage conditions can dramatically impact food functional properties and textures Changing any of these factors can cause significant microstructural alterations resulting in undesirable changes in product stability functionality and texture The lack of knowledge of how these factors impact the final food properties makes development of new food products a process of empirical trial rather than intentional design A fundamental understanding food structure function and texture relationships is critical for targeted design of food products This text is a valuable reference for researchers looking to gain an understanding of how rheology works in semisolid food design and processing

Jimenez-Lopez, 2021-05-07 Legume crops provide a significant source of plant-based proteins for humans. Grain legumes present outstanding nutritional and nutraceutical properties as sources of bioactive components with benefits in human health while they are affordable food that contributes to achieving future food and feed security. Furthermore, they are major ingredients in the Mediterranean diet, playing a vital role in developing countries. Global food security requires a major re-focusing of plant sciences crop improvement and production agronomy towards grain legumes/pulse crops over coming decades with intensive research to identify cultivars with improved grain characteristics helping to develop novel legume-derived products/foods adapted to today's consumer preference. In this context, studies dealing with legume processing impact such as soaking, boiling, microwave cooking, germination and fermentation among others in their nutritional and anti-nutritional i.e. food allergy properties are of great interest in these future food developments. This Research Topic aims to bring together a collection of studies for a better understanding of current research in legume seed compounds/functional properties to provide an updated and global vision of the importance of legumes in human health.
