Sprague William Sprague, 2012-09-01 The plan of the following course of Lectures was suggested to the author by his having often felt the need of a book to put into the hands of the young which would yield them counsel and instruction adapted to every variety of circumstances Such a book he has here attempted to supply a book designed to guard the moral principles and habits of youth amidst the temptations of the world to impress them with the infinite obligations and advantages of true religion to conduct them through that most interesting period of anxious inquiry concerning their salvation to bring them to a cordial acceptance of the gospel offer to assist them in ascertaining their claims to the Christian character and to enable them to prosecute the various duties and conflicts of the Christian life in such a manner that they may finish their course with joy Several of these lectures were written during the author's connection with his late charge at West Springfield and the whole course was originally intended especially for the benefit of the youth of that congregation Since his connection with his present charge he has completed the course and the several lectures embraced in it have been delivered in the hearing of the youth to whom he now ministers and it is in compliance with a respectful and affectionate request from them as well as in accordance with his original design that the series is now given to the public
