IMF Staff Papers, Volume 50, No. 2 Mr. Robert P. Flood, 2003-07-11 This paper examines sources of economic growth in East Asia The conventional growth accounting approach to estimating the sources of economic growth requires unrealistically strong assumptions about either competitiveness of factor markets or the form of the underlying aggregate production function The paper outlines a new approach utilizing nonparametric derivative estimation techniques that does not require imposing these restrictive assumptions The results for East Asian countries show that output elasticities of capital and labor tend to be different from the income shares of these factors The paper also explores the compensating potential of private intergenerational transfers

Sovereign Risk in Macroprudential Solvency Stress Testing Mr. Andreas A. Jobst, Ms. Hiroko Oura, 2019-12-06 This paper explains the treatment of sovereign risk in macroprudential solvency stress testing based on the experiences in the Financial Sector Assessment Program FSAP. We discuss four essential steps in assessing the system wide impact of sovereign risk: scope, loss estimation, shock calibration, and capital impact calculation. Most importantly, a market consistent valuation approach lies at the heart of assessing the resilience of the financial sector in a tail risk scenario with sovereign distress. We present a flexible closed form approach to calibrating haircuts based on changes in expected sovereign defaults affecting bank solvency during adverse macroeconomic conditions. This paper demonstrates the effectiveness of using extreme value theory EVT in this context with empirical examples from past FSAPs.

Early Encounters between East Asia and Europe Ralf Hertel, Michael Keevak, 2017-07-14 While inquiries into early encounters between East Asia and the West have traditionally focused on successful interactions, this collection inquires into the many forms of failure experienced on all sides in the period before 1850. Countering a tendency in scholarship to overlook unsuccessful encounters, it starts from the assumption that failures can prove highly illuminating and provide valuable insights into both the specific shapes and limitations of East Asian and Western imaginations of the Other as well as of the nature of East West interaction. Interdisciplinary in outlook, this collection brings together the perspectives of sinology, Japanese and Korean studies, historical studies, literary studies, art history, religious studies, and performance studies. The subjects discussed are manifold and range from missionary accounts, travel reports, letters, and trade documents to fictional texts as well as material objects such as tea, chinaware, or nautical instruments exchanged between East and West. In order to avoid a Eurocentric perspective, the collection balances approaches from the fields of English literature, Spanish studies, Neo Latin studies, and art history with those of sinology, Japanese studies, and Korean studies. It includes an introduction mapping out the field of failures in early modern encounters between East Asia and Europe as well as a theoretically minded essay on the lessons of failure and the ethics of cross cultural understanding.

Commercial Real Estate in Crisis: Evidence from Transaction-Level Data Mr. Adrian Alter, Elizabeth M. Mahoney, Cristian Badarinza, 2023-01-27 During the past two decades, the commercial real estate (CRE) market has been impacted by major disruptions including the global financial crisis and the Covid 19 pandemic. Using granular data from the U.S., we document how these crises have unfolded and elaborate on the role of heterogeneity and underlying shocks. Both a set of reduced form approaches and a structural framework suggest a prominent role for demand side local factors in the short run along with significant shifts in preferences during crisis episodes However valuations become more closely linked to macro financial factors over the long term A one standard deviation tightening in financial conditions is associated with a drop of about 3 % in CRE prices in the following quarter with a stronger impact on the retail sector and milder effects in states where household indebtedness is lower

Determinants of and Prospects for Market Access in Frontier Economies Victor Hugo C. Alexandrino da Silva, Luiza Antoun de Almeida, Ms. Diva Singh, 2021-05-07 In recent years we have observed an increase in low income countries LICs access to international capital markets especially after the Global Financial Crisis GFC This paper investigates what factors country specific macroeconomic fundamentals and or external variables have contributed to the surge in external bond issuance by these LICs which we refer to in our paper as frontier economies Using data on public and publicly guaranteed PPG external bond issuance outstanding PPG bond stock as well as sovereign spreads we employ panel data analysis to examine factors related to the increase in issuance by these economies as well as the reduction in their spreads over time Our empirical study shows that both country specific fundamentals such as public debt current account balance level of reserves quality of institutions and external variables such as US growth and the VIX index play a role in explaining the increased amount of issuance and the decline in spreads of frontier economies sovereign bonds The impact of some of these variables on issuance appears to reflect a country s need to issue bonds for external financing the supply side of bond issuance while others appear to correlate more through their impact on investors appetite for a country s debt the demand side In addition the impact of country specific variables can also be affected by external factors such as global risk appetite Our analysis of key factors that have contributed to increased market access for frontier economies over the past decade provides important information to gauge the prospects for their continued market access and for other LICs to join this group by tapping international markets for the first time
