- b. When the contribution is paid by the French company, the contribution is recorded as payment for exports of French labor services. It is recorded as the U.S. current account as an export. The balance of payments on the U.S. current account will rise.
- c. When an American buys a Japanese bond, the transaction is recorded as the U.S. financial account as a purchase of a Japanese security as American. The balance of payments on the U.S. financial account will fall.
- d. When an American charity sends a gift to Africa, it is recorded as a transfer payment to a foreigner on the U.S. current account. The balance on the U.S. current account will fall.

9. a. The two diagrams above are identical. The United States has experienced net capital inflows. That is, the net amount received from abroad is less than that sent abroad. The United States, receiving funds as a percentage of GDP, has seen, between 1970 and 1990, the United States' current account balance shift from its current account, which means that in America the surplus of goods and capital inflows from the rest of the world.
- b. Yes, the diagram indicates that capital movements were more tightly linked in 1990 than they were in 1970.
