Recapturing a Future for Space Exploration National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Aeronautics and Space Engineering

Board, Space Studies Board, Committee for the Decadal Survey on Biological and Physical Sciences in Space, 2012-01-30 More than four decades have passed since a human first set foot on the Moon. Great strides have been made in our understanding of what is required to support an enduring human presence in space as evidenced by progressively more advanced orbiting human outposts culminating in the current International Space Station (ISS). However, of the more than 500 humans who have so far ventured into space, most have gone only as far as near Earth orbit and none have traveled beyond the orbit of the Moon. Achieving human progress into the solar system has proved far more difficult than imagined in the heady days of the Apollo missions, but the potential rewards remain substantial. During its more than 50-year history, NASA's success in human space exploration has depended on the agency's ability to effectively address a wide range of biomedical, engineering, physical science, and related obstacles, an achievement made possible by NASA's strong and productive commitments to life and physical sciences research for human space exploration and by its use of human space exploration infrastructures for scientific discovery. The Committee for the Decadal Survey of Biological and Physical Sciences acknowledges the many achievements of NASA, which are all the more remarkable given budgetary challenges and changing directions within the agency. In the past decade, however, a consequence of those challenges has been a life and physical sciences research program that was dramatically reduced in both scale and scope, with the result that the agency is poorly positioned to take full advantage of the scientific opportunities offered by the now fully equipped and staffed ISS laboratory or to effectively pursue the scientific research needed to support the development of advanced human exploration capabilities. Although its review has left it deeply concerned about the current state of NASA's life and physical sciences research, the Committee for the Decadal Survey on Biological and Physical Sciences in Space is nevertheless convinced that a focused science and engineering program can achieve successes that will bring the space community, the U.S. public, and policymakers to an understanding that we are ready for the next significant phase of human space exploration. The goal of this report is to lay out steps and develop a forward-looking portfolio of research that will provide the basis for recapturing the excitement and value of human spaceflight, thereby enabling the U.S. space program to deliver on new exploration initiatives that serve the nation, excite the public, and place the United States again at the forefront of space exploration for the global good.

Dhaka's Changing Landscape Rita Afsar, Mahabub Hossain, 2019-11-05 Between 1991 and 2010 Dhaka's population more than doubled to 15 million Simultaneously the city's contribution to the national economy almost trebled Clearly population growth was accompanied by an unmistakable trend of economic growth and a significant decline in urban poverty and income inequality On the other hand Dhaka's high population density exacerbated serious environmental challenges and it was soon ranked as one of the world's least livable cities In the context of these contradictory signals of rapid urbanization Dhaka's Changing Landscape sets to answer three most intriguing questions Are the poorer segments of urban population which migrate with dreams for better lives benefitting from positive economic trends Are these benefits sustainable Are these benefits creating scope for this group to have a stake in the city's growing prosperity By studying 600 households and applying comparative analysis over a span of 20 years the authors examine demographic and economic trends to understand the patterns scale and complexity of urban poverty income inequality and rural urban migration Going beyond the space and poverty debate they enlighten the readers about the quality of life questions sustainability matters and gender and generational roles and relations necessary to understand qualitative transformation and migrants prospects for a better future

The Imperative of Innovation Juan Carlos Navarro, Pluvia Zúñiga, 2011-11-01 In 2010 the IDB published The Imperative of Innovation, a survey of the status of science, technology and innovation in the Latin American and Caribbean region. The region's technological progress was found to be uneven and insufficient, especially in relation to other regions of the world. The main purposes of this document are to present updated information and to introduce some of the new research and policy know-how accumulated in the course of IDB lending and technical assistance operations in science, technology and innovation. Most of the original diagnostic remains unchanged, mostly in the initial section, although figures have been updated, reflecting the most recently available data. The new figures and indicators presented in this edition are derived from the Compendium of science, technology and innovation indicators compiled by the IDB in late 2010.

Early Engineering Learning Lyn English, Tamara Moore, 2018-05-29 This book addresses engineering learning in early childhood, spanning ages 3 to 8 years. It explores why engineering experiences are important in young children's overall development and how engineering is a core component of early STEM learning, including how engineering education links and supports children's existing experiences in science, mathematics and design and technology both before school and in the early school years. Promoting STEM education across the school years is a key goal of many nations, with the realization that building STEM skills required by societies takes time and needs to begin as early as possible. Despite calls from national and international organisations, the inclusion of engineering-based learning within elementary and primary school programs remains limited in many countries. Engineering experiences for young children in the pre-school or early school years has received almost no attention, even though young children can be considered natural engineers. This book addresses this void by exposing what we know about engineering for young learners, including their capabilities for solving engineering-based problems and the few existing programs that are capitalising on their potential.
