Lisa Tink,2022-06-09 In recent years recreation scholars and professionals began calling for a return to municipal recreation s historical roots as a public good Blaming neoliberal ideology for the current pay per use model these calls for a more inclusive recreation system have suggested the sector s business like practices should be of concern because they are in direct opposition to the historic mandate of equal opportunity. A central assumption underlying these calls for the recreation profession to return to its historical roots is that municipal recreation services until the late 1980s and early 1990s were available to all members of society. This narrative is however a romanticized account of recreation's history. In this book Lisa Tink challenges the often repeated narrative of a more inclusive and equitable era in recreation's past. Tracing some of the conditions that have given rise to what she has termed the recreation industrial complex, Tink's research demonstrates how recreation has by design served the interests of white heterosexual able bodied middle to upper class Canadians. By exposing the ways particular bodies came to be centered in a recreation context, the purpose of this important piece of recreation scholarship is to demonstrate how historical inclusions and exclusions, whether intentional or not, were in fact part of a broader biopolitical project intended to sustain white supremacy with the ultimate goal of encouraging critical dialogues about what is inherently problematic, difficult and dangerous in the discourses, practices and policies that govern our contemporary recreation systems.
