There are two main types of computer virus: Trivial and malicious. A trivial virus does not cause any damage to your computer. It may be a harmless prank or a harmless joke. A malicious virus, on the other hand, is designed to cause damage to your computer. It may delete files, corrupt data, or even crash your computer.

There are many ways to protect your computer from viruses. One of the most important is to keep your operating system and software up to date. Another is to use a virus scanner. You should also be careful of what you download from the Internet and what you open in email.

There are also many ways to spread a virus. One of the most common is through email. If you receive an email from someone you don't know, or if the email contains a suspicious attachment, do not open it. You should also be careful of what you download from the Internet.
