

1. Using a pencil, draw a line on the seafloor to show where new ocean crust and lithosphere is forming now (zero millions of years old). Using Figs. 2.1, 2.3, and 2.12 as guides, label the segments of your line that are Juan de Fuca Ridge and Gorda Ridge (divergent plate boundaries). Then label the segments of your pencil line that are transform fault plate boundaries. Add half arrows to the transform fault boundaries to show the motion of the two plates relative to the transform fault.

2. What has been the average rate and direction of sea-floor spreading in cm per year (cm/yr.) west of the Juan de Fuca Ridge, from B to A? Show your work.

The distance from B to A is $= (1.7 / 3.3) * 500 = 257.57$ kilometers $= 257.57 * 10^5$ centimeters
Time taken move from B to A = 6.8 million years $= 6.8 * 10^6$ years
Rate Of Spreading $= (257.57 * 10^5 \text{ centimeters} / 6.8 * 10^6 \text{ years}) = 3.79 \text{ cm/ year}$

3. What has been the average rate and direction of sea-floor spreading in cm per year (cm/yr.) east of the Juan de Fuca Ridge, from B to C? Show your work.

The distance from B to A is $= (1.5 / 3.3) * 500 = 227.27$ kilometers $= 227.27 * 10^5$ centimeters
Time taken move from B to C = 6.7 million years $= 6.7 * 10^6$ years
Rate of spreading $= (227.27 * 10^5 \text{ centimeters} / 6.7 * 10^6 \text{ years}) = 3.39 \text{ cm/ year}$

4. Notice that rocks older than 11 million years are present west of the Juan de Fuca Ridge but not east of the ridge. What could be happening to the sea-floor rocks along line segment C-D that would explain why rocks older than 11 million years no longer exist on the seafloor east of the ridge?

There would be subduction zone on the east of the ridge where rocks older than 11 million year old will be subducting and hence is converting into magma.

5. Notice the black curve with triangular barbs just east of point C:

(a) If you could take a submarine to view the sea floor along this line, what feature would you expect to see? (Hint see Fig. 2.1A.)

(b) Based on Fig. 2.1, what lithospheric plate is located east of the black barbed line at point C?

(c) Based on Fig. 2.1, what lithospheric plate is located west of the black barbed line at point C?

6. REFLECT & DISCUSS Notice the line of volcanoes that form the Cascade Range, extending from northern California to southern Canada. These are active volcanoes, meaning that they still erupt from time to time. What sequence of plate tectonic events is causing these volcanoes to form?

Ocean Island Volcanoes: Genesis, Evolution and Impact Adriano Pimentel, Ricardo S. Ramalho, Laura Becerril, Patricia Larrea, Richard J. Brown, 2020-06-08 Ocean island volcanoes constitute some of the most prominent and rapidly formed features on Earth and yet they cannot be explained by conventional plate tectonics Although typically associated with intraplate settings hotspots these volcanoes also occur in different geodynamic settings near mid ocean ridges The nature of ocean island magmatism is still the subject of intense debate within the geological community Traditionally it has been linked to the presence of mantle plumes at depth e g Hawaii although the interaction with plate tectonics is also recognized to play a significant role e g Azores Gal pagos Magma compositions may range from basaltic to more differentiated which consequently is accompanied by striking changes in the eruption style from effusive dominated to highly explosive volcanism Understanding how these magmas evolve and how volcanic processes act at ocean island volcanoes are key issues of modern volcanology Moreover the growth of ocean island volcanoes from their rise on the seafloor as seamounts to island emergence and subsequent formation of shield volcanoes and in some cases large caldera volcanoes is governed by multiple interrelated changes It is well known that competing processes model ocean island volcanoes during alternating and or coeval periods of construction and destruction The geological evolution of these volcanoes results from the balance among volcanism intrusions tectonics subsidence uplift mass wasting sedimentation and subaerial and wave erosion A better knowledge of the interplay between these processes is crucial to obtain a more comprehensive understanding of the evolution of such volcanoes and to the eventual formulation of a unified model for ocean island evolution Ocean islands are especially vulnerable to volcanic eruptions and other geological hazards on account of their typical small size rough topography and isolation which make risk management and evacuation difficult Volcanic eruptions in particular may have a significant impact on local populations infrastructures economy and even on the global climate It is therefore fundamental to monitor these volcanoes with complementary geophysical geodetic and geochemical techniques in order to forecast future eruptions and their impacts However the assessment of volcanic hazards on ocean islands is challenging due to the large variety of phenomena involved e g lava flows tephra fallout pyroclastic density currents lahars gas emissions Different approaches are used to assess volcanic
