

Interim Assessment Answer Key

Constructed Response

16. What is the author's purpose in writing the passage Are You Smarter Than a Fifth Grader? Did the author achieve it? Why or why not? Use examples from the text to support your answer.

Scoring [Notes] "Teacher Language"

Student gives essential elements of a complete interpretation: Essential elements of a complete interpretation consists of explicit evidence of support from the passage in order to answer the prompt: did the author achieve his/her purpose.

Aspects of the Task/Evidence: Aspects/Evidence of the interpretation of the prompt is dependent on explicit textual evidence from the passage. Students must first state the author's purpose. The author's purpose in this passage is to inform the readers about the television show Are You Smarter Than a Fifth Grader and can infer the author wants the reader's to watch the show. Some of these aspects (examples) from the passage to support the author's purpose could include: (1) 26.5 million viewers watched the premier – the biggest audience in eight years for a premier (2) explaining the objective and prize $1,000,000! (3) how it appeals to kids and adults because fifth graders appear on each episode to lend a hand and (4) what happens to the losing contestant. The passage ends with the day and time of the show.

focused and organized, consistently addressing: The sentences vary in length and interest depending on the point the student is making about the topic.

3	Sample Response "Student Language" Student identifies the author's purpose (to inform and motivate readers to watch the show), gives an opinion about the author's purpose being achieved and supports that opinion with 3-4 strong examples. The author's purpose is to inform us about the host of the show, how many viewers, and when the show began. The author wants readers of this passage to watch the show because the last sentence of the passage tells what day and time the show is aired. I believe the author achieved his goal. The examples from text motivate the reader to watch the show. First, the author also gives us details about a panel of five fifth graders that lend a hand to the grown-up contestants with the subjects they have to tackle. Then, the author states that the grand prize is a million dollars. Finally, the author explains that if you lose, you have to face the camera and say, "I'm not smarter than a fifth grader." These are very motivating and exciting and could make the reader want to view the show.
2	Sample Response The student infers the author's purpose but does not state explicitly, does not state if the author achieved the purpose but again infers with 1-2 examples. The author wants to tell readers about the show so maybe they'll watch the show. The author says kid's help adults win up to one million dollars. If they lose, adults have to say, "I'm not smarter than a fifth grader." These are good reasons to watch the show.
1	Sample Response Student states the author's opinion but not purpose and does not give examples. The author likes the new show. The author makes it sound like it's a lot of fun.
0	Sample Response Student does not answer the prompt. It's a good TV show.

Standard RI.6.6

Determine an author's point of view or purpose in a text and explain how it is conveyed in the text.
