

FUEL SYSTEM

The fuel system is responsible for delivering the proper amount of fuel to the engine at all times. It consists of the fuel tank, fuel pump, fuel filter, fuel lines, and fuel injectors. The fuel pump is driven by the engine and draws fuel from the tank. The fuel filter removes any dirt or debris from the fuel before it reaches the injectors. The fuel lines carry the fuel from the pump to the injectors. The injectors spray the fuel into the combustion chamber where it is ignited by the spark plugs.

There are two main types of fuel systems: carburetor and fuel injection. A carburetor mixes the fuel and air before it enters the engine. Fuel injection delivers the fuel directly to the combustion chamber. Fuel injection is more precise and efficient than a carburetor. It allows for better control of the fuel-air mixture, which results in better engine performance and fuel economy.

The fuel system is a critical part of the engine. If it malfunctions, the engine will not run properly. Common problems include clogged fuel filters, faulty fuel pumps, and leaking fuel lines. Regular maintenance is essential to keep the fuel system in good working order. This includes checking the fuel filter, fuel pump, and fuel lines for leaks and replacing them as needed.
