Prof. Dinesh C. Sharma

ISI is the Institute for Scientific Information. It was founded in 1960 by Eugene Garfield who pretty much invented bibliometrics. He created SSCI, SCI, Current Contents, and lots of other stuff. ISI was purchased by Thomson Reuters over 20 years ago.

Journal Citation Reports (JCR) is also produced by Thomson Reuters. It focuses on journals, rather than specific works or scholars, and provides a lot of data about journals – various impact factors, citations, trend data, and so on.

The Master Journal list is the list of all the journals covered in the Web of Science (as well as some other databases as well). The term “ISI journal” doesn’t really mean anything anymore, since “ISI” was removed when Thomson Reuters changed the name from ISI Web of Knowledge to Web of Science. But given that, then yes, if a journal is indexed in the WoS then it is what used to be called an ISI journal.
