Human Remains & Museum Practice Unesco. General

Conference, 2006 Human Remains and Museum Practice reflects the discussions held at the Museum of London as part of an international symposium on the political and ethical dimensions of the collection and display of human remains in museums. It explores fundamental issues of collecting and displaying human remains including ethics interpretation and repatriation as they apply in different parts of the world. The first section looks at the overriding issues whilst the second part describes the practices in different parts of the world.

Comparative Osteology Bradley Adams, Pam Crabtree, 2011-08-12 In the forensic context it is quite common for nonhuman bones to be confused with human remains and end up in the medical examiner or coroner system. It is also quite common for skeletal remains both human and nonhuman to be discovered in archaeological contexts. While the difference between human and nonhuman bones is often very striking it can also be quite subtle. Fragmentation only compounds the problem. The ability to differentiate between human and nonhuman bones is dependent on the training of the analyst and the available reference and/or comparative material. Comparative Osteology is a photographic atlas of common North American animal bones designed for use as a laboratory and field guide by the forensic scientist or archaeologist. The intent of the guide is not to be inclusive of all animals but rather to present some of the most common species which also have the highest likelihood of being potentially confused with human remains. An affordably priced compact laboratory field manual comparing human and nonhuman bones. Contains almost 600 high quality black and white images and diagrams including inch and centimeter scales with each photograph. Written by the foremost forensic scientists with decades of experience in the laboratory and as expert witnesses. An additional Companion Web site hosts images from the volume the reader can magnify and zoom into to see specific landmarks and features on bones. <http://booksite.academicpress.com/9780123884374>

A Review of Human Osteology--A Laboratory and Field Manual Third Edition M. Yaşar Işcan, 1988 This is a book that the author should be proud of for its success in North American osteology. This success can be measured by the fact that it is in its third edition and the first two went through their sixth and fourth printings respectively since it was first published in 1971. This third edition unlike the second is completely revised and updated throughout. It is 40 pages longer and contains 54 tables and 190 figures, 11 tables and 32 figures more than the 1979 edition. The font size is larger and the book is available in both spiral and bound forms. While I personally preferred the bound form my students disagreed.

Forensic Anthropology Megan B. Brickley, Roxana Ferllini, 2007 This important new text contains the first collection of forensic anthropology case studies to be published from Europe. Forensic Anthropology Case Studies From Europe aims to highlight recent developments in the discipline within Europe and to allow comparisons to be made between work done in various European countries and the Americas. This book is comprehensive with nineteen contributors providing case studies from recent work undertaken across twelve European countries including three chapters covering the work of forensic anthropologists in cases that involve human rights issues in the Balkan region. The book not only highlights the history and development of forensic anthropology in Europe but also illustrates the diversity of work the different academic backgrounds of those practicing in the field and the different approach that they have towards the work that they undertake making this book unique In addition to covering the work undertaken in a number of European countries the case studies presented cover a range of issues dealt with by forensic anthropologists from around the world including stab wounds blunt force trauma gunshot wounds dismemberment burning personal identification including issues relating to the investigation of ancestry in European investigations juvenile human remains the work of forensic anthropologists in unsolved cases and work undertaken to eliminate discoveries of human remains from police investigations The final chapter of the book explores new developments in the field of forensic anthropology with gait analysis and facial recognition of a living individual based on analysis of CCTV footage This book is primarily designed for students of forensic anthropology and those engaged in forensic anthropological work in various areas of the world Each chapter contains clear up to date references and a full discussion of the techniques applied which also make this book accessible for the nonspecialist reader
