

RFQ008 Radio Frequency Interference Statement

The equipment contains radio and/or a control radio that falls under the Radio Frequency Interference (RFI) rules. These rules are designed to protect vulnerable electronic systems and services when the equipment generates a radio wave signal. The equipment generates radio waves that interfere with frequency sharing and RFI control and used in accordance with the intended method. This interference is not intended to cause interference. Operation of the equipment is in accordance with a radio communication standard. It is not intended to cause interference with the operation of the radio system.

Section 1

The changes to regulations are expected, providing the user responsible for installation and use with the authority to operate the equipment.

Section 2

Standard radio wave and RFI power level (dBm) should be used to comply with the relevant radio wave control (e.g. radio wave control) and RFI control.

Radio Frequency Interference
100-1000

The device complies with Part 15 of the FCC Rules. Operation is subject to the following conditions:

(1) This device may not cause harmful interference, and

(2) this device must accept any interference received, including interference that may cause undesired operation.
