

CHAPTER 1

Review

1.1 In your own words, what are the differences between product testing and statistical testing?

Product testing includes: (a) The goal of the test procedure is different. Different product testing is designed to discover the difference of a component under consideration that meets, meets-second-best, excellent, meeting or exceeds the customer (functional) functional properties that are independent of the measured value. (b) The elements change in different product testing since the material is the change in which it will be used in the test product. Statistical testing tests individual specimens always designed to statistically determine the average properties of the material with the integral material properties.

1.2 What are the shortcomings, differences between statistical, planning, and process?

Statistical methods are different from a fully variable when the applied data is measured (mean of a value over the mean). Planning is performed before change without considering more than one level of the variable. Planning inherently involves breaking up the data and the variation of the variables. Different methods of these procedures take place in statistical methods, but the application of methods for experimental process the values.

1.3 What are the differences between engineering stress, true stress, engineering strain, and true strain for loading along a single axis.

$$\sigma_{eng} = \text{engineering stress} = \frac{\text{load}}{\text{initial cross-sectional area}} = \frac{P}{A_0} \quad (1-1a)$$

$$\sigma_{true} = \text{true stress} = \frac{\text{load}}{\text{instantaneous cross-sectional area}} = \frac{P}{A_i} \quad (1-2a)$$

$$\epsilon_{eng} = \text{engineering strain} = \frac{\text{change in length}}{\text{initial length}} = \frac{l_i - l_0}{l_0} \quad (1-1b)$$

$$\epsilon_{true} = \text{true strain} = \ln \frac{\text{final length}}{\text{initial length}} = \ln \frac{l_i}{l_0} \quad (1-2b)$$

1.4 Under what conditions in Fig. 1-1 will? What makes it so large? small? or none of the above?
