Human reproduction

Human reproduction is sexual reproduction involving male and female reproductive cells called gametes. The reproductive system includes organs called gonads that produce gametes and hormones; ducts for transport, storage and transportation of gametes; accessory organs and glands for fluid secretion; and internal genitalia. Reproduction is regulated by hormones produced by the gonads, the hypothalamus and the pituitary gland. Fertilisation involves the introduction of sperm into the vagina. The sperm travels through the female reproductive tract until it encounters an ovum, a female sex cell. Fertilisation can then take place.

Male reproductive system

The adult male reproductive system is a collection of two primary external structures, the testes and the penis. The testes are divided into thousands of tiny compartments or lobules containing seminiferous tubules, tightly coiled structures where sperm formation takes place.

The testes are situated in a sac called the scrotum, which provides support and regulates the position of the testes relative to the body. The scrotum is located below the testes, near the perineum, an external compartment to maintain the proper temperature within the testes for sperm formation.

Seminiferous tubules produce sperm cells, which are transported to the epididymis, a structure located on top of the testes. The epididymis is responsible for maintaining the structure and function of the sperm cells and promoting the development of male secondary sex characteristics.

Acrosomal reaction

Fusion of plasma membranes

Fertilization

The upper portion of the vagina leads to the canal for fertilisation. Millions of sperm travel through the female reproductive tract, following the path of the egg. When a sperm enters the vagina, it begins its journey. The sperm travels through the cervix, the uterus, and the fallopian tube, where it meets the egg. The sperm enters the egg, and the egg's nucleus and cytoplasm combine with the sperm's nucleus and cytoplasm. The egg's nucleus contains the chromosomes of the egg, and the sperm's nucleus contains the chromosomes of the sperm. The fusion of the two nuclei results in a new cell, the zygote, which contains the genetic material of both parents.

Zona reaction

2-cell stage

Female reproductive system

The internal structures of the adult female reproductive system include the vagina, uterus, ovaries and fallopian tubes. These structures form a pathway allowing the release of an egg cell, fertilisation, its growth and delivery of a developed fetus. The vagina is a muscular canal that leads from the uterus to the outside of the body. It is the birth canal. The fallopian tubes are located on either side of the uterus and are responsible for transporting the egg from the ovaries to the uterus. The ovaries are located on either side of the uterus and are responsible for producing and releasing the egg. The uterus is a muscular organ that is responsible for housing and nurturing the developing fetus. The fallopian tubes are responsible for transporting the egg from the ovaries to the uterus. The vagina is responsible for the passage of sperm and menstrual discharge. The uterus is a hollow, pear-shaped organ with muscular walls that contract during childbirth. The cervix is the lower part of the uterus, which opens into the vagina. The fallopian tubes are responsible for transporting the egg from the ovaries to the uterus. The vagina is responsible for the passage of sperm and menstrual discharge. The uterus is a hollow, pear-shaped organ with muscular walls that contract during childbirth. The cervix is the lower part of the uterus, which opens into the vagina.

Spermatozoon

The ovaries, located on each side of the uterus, are responsible for producing ova as well as the female sex hormones estrogen and progesterone. Estrogen is responsible for the development of the female reproductive system, sexual characteristics, and breast development. Progesterone prepares the uterus lining for implantation of a fertilized egg and is necessary for breast milk production. The ovaries are connected to the uterus by the fallopian tubes, narrow ducts that provide a passageway for the egg to reach the uterus.

Ovulation & the menstrual cycle

The menstrual cycle refers to the sequence of events that occurs in the endometrium, the lining of the uterus. The cycle typically lasts approximately 28 days. The purpose of the cycle is to prepare the uterus for possible pregnancy. The menstrual cycle is governed by the endocrine system. It involves the release of eggs from the ovaries, the thickening of the uterine lining, and the shedding of the lining if pregnancy does not occur. The cycle is regulated by hormones from the hypothalamus and pituitary gland.
