

Over the past 60 years the American consumer has been offered many kinds of luxury items, conveniences, labor saving devices, and recreation and sports equipment. The ingenuity of the inventor, combined with engineering and manufacturing know-how, has provided the consumer with many things he would not even have dreamed before. That's PROGRESS.

Today, service and repair shops "never had it so good." Many of these luxuries and conveniences are mechanical. They have become necessities. As a result, the good service repair shop has started to build and expand. And, the number of shops has increased terrifically in the past few years.

New discoveries are being made every day. Inventions are turned into products ready for the consumer in ever increasing quantities year after year. So, the service business should be good for many, many years to come. And, manufacturers are becoming increasingly aware of the consumer as the "guy who pays for everything." He is the one they have to keep happy.

Quality manufacturers realize that the closest link they have with the consumer is that which exists through their service dealers. That's why many manufacturers, including Lawn-Boy, have based their over all service programs on the service dealer level, planning the entire program upward from there. Years ago we started our Lawn-Boy service program by planning the easiest and simplest methods of service procedure and policy, including the no parts returned to the factory unless requested - standard per hour warranty labor rate - fair and reasonable time limits established for various repair jobs with reimbursement of service dealer costs for parts used in warranty repairs. We will continue to do everything we can to make servicing accounts work easier and, if possible, more profitable.

There will be a tremendous opportunity, in our opinion, in the service repair business during the next 10 to 15 years. There will be many new mechanical labor saving devices produced which cannot help but demand more, better, and faster repair shop service throughout the country. Lawn-Boy will continue to develop new products and improve design of all their lawn and gardening products from year to year.

THE OPPORTUNITY IS YOURS. IT'S UP TO YOU.
