

Fitbit Versa Tips and Tricks

Improve battery life

The Versa performs pretty well on the battery front. Fitbit claims it's possible to get up to five days, and in our testing we've comfortably managed to get around four days. If you do want to increase the time that you have before you need to reach for the charger, there are a couple of simple things you can do.

The first is to turn off continuous heart rate monitoring, which you can do from the Settings menu on the watch. Our other power saving tip is to turn the 'Always-On' watch mode off when you are tracking exercises. You can do this before you start logging an activity by tapping the settings cog icon and scrolling down and turning off the 'Always-On Screen' mode.

Gestures

The Versa has a touchscreen, along with physical buttons for navigation. From the main screen, or watchface, each gesture does something a bit different:

- Swipe up: Reveals notifications
- Swipe down: Music controls
- Swipe right: Shortcut to limited settings
- Swipe left: View installed apps

Button navigation

There are three physical buttons on the Versa. Each one pulls double duty with a short and a long press from the main watch face.

The left button acts as your back button, or if you hold it in long enough, Fitbit Pay launches. The top-right button launches the first app in your app dock with a short press; a long press will open music playback controls. The bottom-right button gives you quick access to the third app in your app dock, while a long-press reveals your notifications.

Download new apps and watch faces

Fitbit's App Gallery is now open for business, meaning you can now download third-party apps onto your Versa. Unlike Android Wear, you can't download apps from the watch itself, just the smartphone. The app store isn't anywhere to be seen on the dashboard, so you need to tap onto your Versa device in the top left corner and then tap on Apps. You will then see a list of apps to browse through, and to download one you just need to tap one and then tap the pink 'Install' button.

Once you've downloaded an app you'll see it under 'My Apps'. Worth checking here and seeing if there
