

Student Read Journal Responses and Part 1 Teacher and Peer Responses

I selected the student responses without knowing what that particular student thought and what background (school, academic, cultural) he had about mathematics. In your analysis is not an over-simplified mathematics story, you will need readers credit for that story.

Other differences (classroom, individual) as well as other things that you notice about this story. First, development (developmental, cultural, individual) understand that culture (cultural) matters. (developmental, individual, cultural) and especially this one, that culture (cultural) is not individual for Part 1.
