

Human Geography: Test 1 Study Guide

- Lecture 1: What is human geography?
 - Geography
 - To write about or describe the Earth
 - Two Branches of geography
 - 1. Human
 - The study of people, places, spatial variation in human activities, and the relationship between people and the environment.
 - 2. Physical
 - Mountain geography, geography of snow and ice, geomorphology, meteorology/climatology
 - Four nature-culture relationship theories
 - 1. Environmental determinism
 - Nature affects/determines humans and their behavior—people do not have freewill (individuals and communities will create practices and norms that adapt to the environment)
 - 2. Possibilism
 - People use their creativity to decide how to respond to conditions of a particular environment (nature constrains humans and their behavior)
 - Technological advances > environmental influences
 - 3. Humans as Modifiers of the earth
 - Ability of humans to modify their landscape into cultural landscapes (nature is socially constructed and changes over time)
 - Ex. Wilderness
 - Place to be feared => romantic place => place of recreation/escape
 - 4. Earth as a dynamic, integrated system
 - People are intricately connected with the natural world. The earth functions as a system with interconnecting components. The earth is constantly changing from human and natural forces.
- Lecture 2: Thinking like a geographer
 - Three types of regions
 - 1. Formal—an area that possesses one or more unifying physical or cultural traits (crops, climate, religion, political boundaries)
 - 2. Functional— an area unified by a specific economic, political, or social activity (Main Hall and campus, metropolitan areas and suburbs)
 - 3. Perceptual— area defined by people's feelings and attachment to different areas (the south, the bible belt, Griz nation)
 - Absolute and relative location
 - Absolute Location—the location of a place based on a fixed point on earth (latitude and longitude)

Human Resource Management Practices in Selected Ethiopian Private Companies: A Study to Increase Employee Productivity in Ethiopia Dirk J. van Wasbeek, 2004-09-24 This dissertation examines how human resources are managed at selected Ethiopian private companies how Ethiopian human resource management practice is evolving and how it can be improved The examination is qualitative and exploratory since no comparative research on human resource management has yet been conducted at Ethiopian profit or non profit organizations An understanding of Ethiopian human resource management practice makes it possible to improve Ethiopian human resource management practice and thus to increase employee productivity The study took place at four manufacturing and four service companies in Addis Ababa all representative of their sector The research claim is that Ethiopian human resource management practices differ from human resource management practices in the West due to differences in cultural factors economic systems political systems and legal and industrial relations For this reason Ethiopia's culture politics economy and legal and industrial relations have been analyzed The main finding of this study is that the importance of human resource management is not uniformly understood at all the case study companies Although the multinational companies based in Ethiopia see their human resources as the companies most important asset as human capital the local companies generally do not The fact that respondents claim that Ethiopia has limited experience in industrialization might explain why human resource management in Ethiopia is rudimentary and still has a long way to go With this dissertation the researcher wants to contribute to improving Ethiopian human resource management practice Moreover this dissertation may be used as a framework for similar research in other sectors or for more specific in depth research This dissertation may also serve as a knowledge base for company managers business consultants academics and government officials of countries with a national culture similar to Ethiopia's for example Kenya Tanzania and Zambia countries undergoing or which have undergone a recent transition to a free market
